

The International Atherosclerosis Society is very pleased to announce the

Antonio M. Gotto, Jr. Prize in Atherosclerosis Research

The aim of the Gotto Prize is to encourage basic, clinical, and translational research in areas relating to the causes, prevention, and treatment of cardiovascular disease globally. The award recipient will have provided and continues to provide outstanding scientific, medical, or organizational advancement in our ability to understand the causes and to reduce the development of atherosclerosis.

Past winners of this prize have been
Helen H. Hobbs, MD and M. John Chapman, PhD, DSc

The Prize is sponsored by Weill Cornell Medical College and the International Atherosclerosis Society.

We value your suggestions of candidates for this prestigious award which will be presented during the upcoming International Symposium on Atherosclerosis, June 9-12, 2018 in Toronto, Canada

Please send your nomination along with the candidate's CV and a letter in support of your candidate to the Selection Committee for its consideration to

GottoPrize@athero.org

by Monday, January 15, 2018